HISTORY OF THE BULLETS

WHEN CLAIR BEE, coach of the Baltimore Bullets and universally regarded as one of the nation's outstanding basketball figures bought the pro-cage franchise in the National Basketball Association, the move was and has been hailed with great enthusiasm by everyone.

As president and coach, Clair Bee brings to Baltimore a wealth of experience, cage tradition and success. Taking over the Bullets coaching reins in mid-November of last year, he steered a very mediocre outfit into the NBA playoffs for the first time in four years.

The Year 1944 marked Baltimore's entry into professional basketball in the American League. Lieut. Ben Kramer, a former pupil of Bee led the Bullets to second place behind the perennial champs, the Philadelphia Sphas. In mid-season, Howard "Red" Rosan, ex-Temple ace, took over.

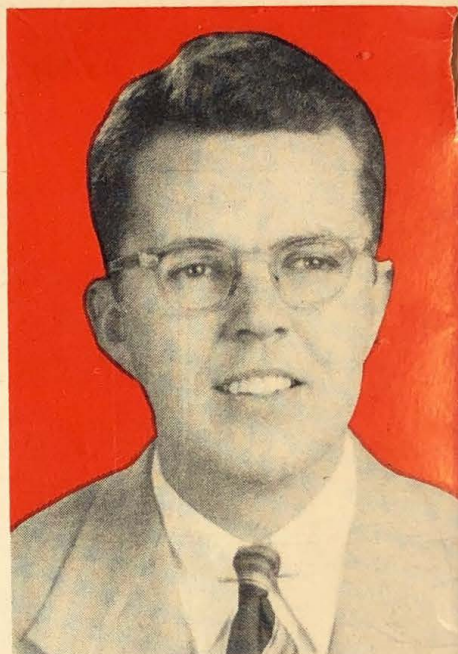

In 1945-46, the Bullets beat the Sphas for the loop crown as the free-wheeling Stutz was second to Philadelphia's giant Art Hillhouse (another Bee product) as the loop's top point-getter. Mike Bloom at 6-6 was another standout, getting 364 points for a 10.8 per game mark and led the Bullets in the playoffs in scoring 79 to Stutz' 76. In 1946-47, player-coach Buddy Jeannette entered the scene and led Baltimore to the championship of the American League, eclipsing the 31-31 loop record by a 62-10 over all slate.

In 1947-48, Baltimore with Jeannette won the BAA title in their first year of competition in the majors. The Club's offensive stars were Kleggie Hermsen, Chick Reiser, Connie Simmons and Paul Hoffman. After finishing second in the western division, the Bullets went on to win the post-season playoffs.

For the 1948-49 campaign the Bullets wound up third but lost to New York in the playoffs. Twenty local sports minded citizens operated the Club from midway through the 1949 season to the end of 1950-51. Jeannette was replaced by his 1948-49 freshman ace Walt Budko as coach of the 1950-51 team in January. At the conclusion of the season the Club was sold to a Baltimore brewer. The next two seasons saw the Bullets experience rough sledding as first Fred Scolari, former Washington Caps tormentor of the locals and Chick Reiser, star of 1947-48 Bullets piloted the aggregation.

In mid-November of 1952, Clair Bee entered the scene.

Bob Elmer, who has been connected with the Bullets in a variety of capacities since pro-basketball was first introduced in Baltimore in 1944, continues as director of publicity and promotions and Miss Margaret Reiley reigns as secretary-treasurer and handling of many office functions.

CLAIR BEE

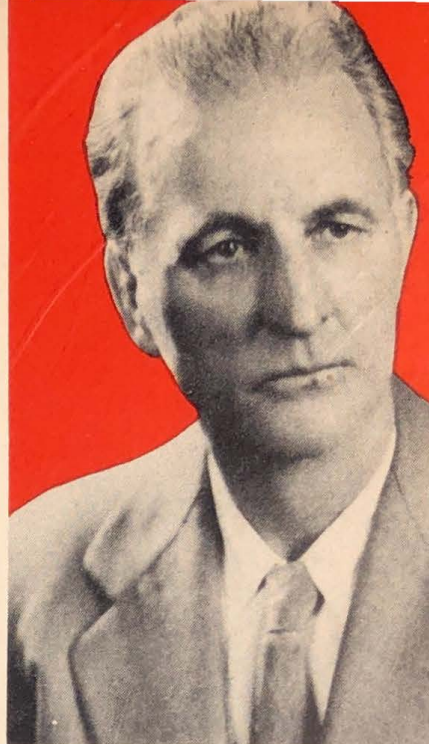

Regarded by many as one of the nation's outstanding basketball coaches, a great leader of men, an expert teacher of all phases of the cage sport, Clair Bee is also owner of the Bullets.

Clair Bee was born in Parkersburg, West Virginia in 1900, attended Grafton High School, Massanutten Military Academy, Woodstock, Va., Ohio State University, Waynesburg College, Rider College and Rutgers University. He received his B.S. from Waynesburg in 1925 and subsequently, B.A., B.C.S., M.C.S. and M.A. While in college he won 15 varsity letters.

Under his tutelage the LIU Blackbirds were undefeated and National Champions in 1936, 1939 and 1941. A number of long winning streaks were developed, consisting of 43, 38, 28 and 26 consecutive wins. He has achieved an unbelievable .880 winning percentage during his collegiate coaching career.

Bee coached the College All-Stars five years in their post-season series with the Harlem Globetrotters.

Coach Bee lives on a large farm in Roscoe, N. Y., is married and the father of two children, Clair Francis, Jr., 4, and Cynthia Ann, 1. A gentleman farmer, author, athlete and coach, Clair Bee's work calendar is never ending. During the summer he conducts his Clair Bee All-American Coaching School and summer camp which over 100 boys attend. At this two month camp the nation's top cage coaches and players spend from one to eight weeks.

No. 15 ED MILLER
New Rochelle, N. Y.

22 6-9 230
Syracuse U.

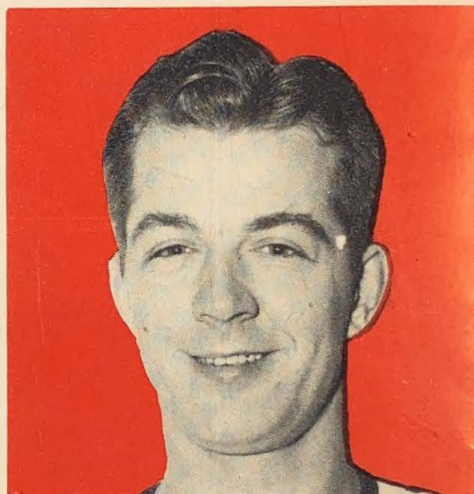

Starting his second season of pro ball in the NBA. Acquired early last winter by the Bullets from the Milwaukee Hawks in a trade for the aging George Ratkovicz. Under Coach Bee this powerfully built youngster developed into one of the league's better centers, winding up with a 10.5 per game mark in 70 tilts. Miller is single and this past summer spent considerable time at Coach Bee's summer basketball camp in the Catskill Mountains in New York.

28 6-4 195
Notre Dame

Captain and all-American at Notre Dame, set Irish standard of missing only one game in four years and missed by two points of setting an all-time Irish scoring record. Started pro career with Chicago Stags in 1949-50 and has been with the Olympians the past three campaigns. Led the Olymps in scoring last winter.

Jasper, Indiana

28 6-2 195
Purdue

All-American at Purdue, the rugged Hoosier ace who is known to local pro-cage fans as the "Bear" for his bruising, hustling tactics, was the spark plug of the Bullets 1947-48 title squad. Since then, Paul has been an off-again, on-again guy, retiring in 1948-49; coming back to lead the 1949-50 team in scoring; stumbling through a mediocre 1950-51 campaign, retiring again for 1951-52 year, but again donning Bullet togs for the 1952-53 season.

No. 25 RAY FELIX
New York, N. Y.

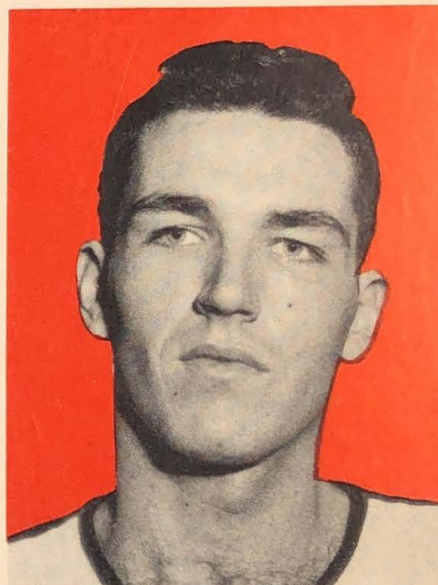

22 6-11 220
Long Island U.

Tallest cager on the "new" Bullets squad and one of the giants of the NBA at 6 feet 11 inches. The 22 year old Negro hoopster played for Coach Bee at Long Island University in 1950. After LIU dropped the cage sport, Felix remained there and played pro ball in the east coast American League. Last winter with Manchester he led the league in scoring with 616 points in 28 games for a 22 point per game mark. Climaxed a great season by winning the final championship post-season playoff game with Wilkes-Barre with a 42 point turnout. Single.

No. 19 JIM FRITSCHÉ
St. Paul, Minn.

22 6-7 220
Hamline

No. 1 college draft choice of the Minneapolis Lakers this year was sold to Bullets in early November. Four-year star at Hamline University and mentioned on several all-America squads. Attended St. Paul Humboldt High School in Minnesota prior to gaining cage stature at Hamline. Helped Hamline to four straight Minnesota college titles and averaged 17.2 for three seasons of college play. Single.

Seattle, Wash.

21 6-8 230
Washington

No. 1 draft choice of the Milwaukee Hawks this past spring, Houbregs was secured by the Bullets for the veteran Max Zaslofsky in a sensational deal the early part of the campaign. The tall California giant made everybody's all-america last winter as one of the nation's leading college scorers from the U. of Washington. Recently he was awarded the Los Angeles Times annual trophy as the outstanding college basketball player of 1953. Houbregs is most famous for his out-of-this-world hook shot, which steered him to a 13.6 average as a soph; 16.8 as a junior and a fantastic 25.6 in his senior season.

No. 18 ROLLEN HANS

Los Angeles, Calif.

22 6-2 210

Long Island U.

Sturdy and swift Negro rookie backcourt cager from the west coast. Played briefly for Coach Bee at LIU in 1950 and then returned home to finish up his college career at Los Angeles City College. Served two years in the Navy and played with teammates Uplinger and Roges on the Los Alamitos Naval Air Station five which won the U. S. Service Basketball Championship last winter. Married.

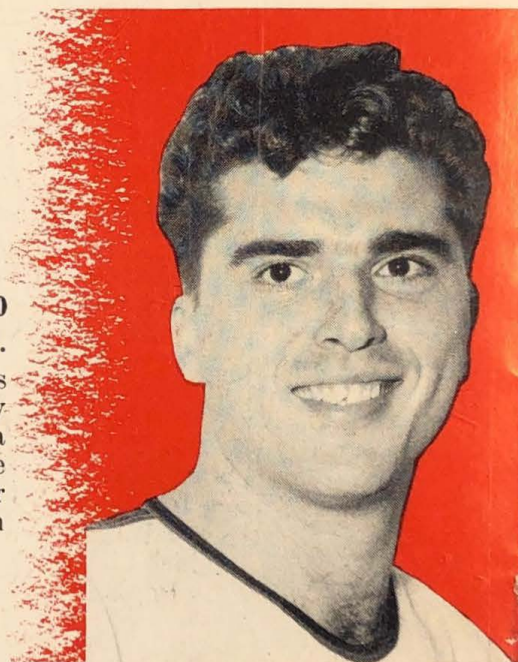

No. 12 AL ROGES

Los Angeles, Calif.

22 6-4 210

Long Island U.

A protege of Coach Clair Bee on the mentor's last LIU team of 1950. Starred at Los Angeles City College before moving east to Long Island for a winter. Returned to his Los Angeles home and the past two seasons has teamed up with pals Uplinger and Hans on the Los Alamitos Naval Air Station service title quintet. Single.

No. 14 JIM LUISI

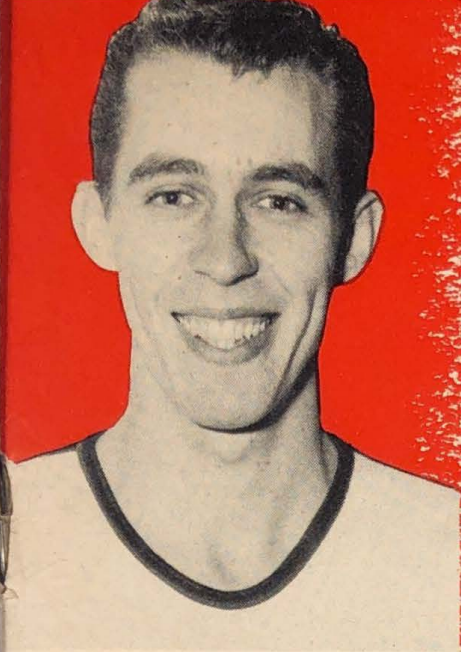

New York, N. Y.

23 6-2 180

St. Francis

First year in NBA. Obtained by Bullets from New York Knicks in the Zaslofsky-Baechtold swap. Originally a college draft choice of the Boston Celtics was swapped to the Knicks and now to Baltimore. Four year cage star at St. Francis College of Brooklyn, was co-captain and highscorer in 1950-51 season with 436 points for 14.7 average. In army for two years with 9 months service in the states and 13 months in Iceland. Won MVP award in Northeast Air Command tournament at MacAndrew AFB in Newfoundland last winter. Single.

No. 17 HAROLD UPLINGER 23 6-4 185
Los Angeles, Calif. Long Island U.

Third of the rookie west-coast-LIU trio whom Coach Bee has acquired just out of service for his 1953-54 Bullet squad. "Uppie" played first string ball for LIU in 1950, and led the Los Alamitos Navy championship five in scoring last winter. Although somewhat fragile looking, Uplinger is usually good for the whole 48 and has a remarkably soft and accurate one-hand push shot. Single.

DON HENRIKSEN
Palo Alto, California

23 6-7 225
California

One of the reasons Coach Bee looks hopefully towards next winter is this 23 year old, 225 pound, 6 foot 7 inch youngster, who enjoyed a great freshman season with the Bullets last year and will definitely be back with the Bullets next year. In his first NBA campaign with the Bullets the California cager scored 574 points in 68 tilts an 8.4 per game average. Prior to entering the pro ranks, Henriksen played two years of varsity basketball at California and two years ago was first string with the strong Stewart Chevrolet five in the AAU ranks. This winter, Don stayed out of basketball to complete his education which includes a B.S. and Masters at California and a Ph. D in geology at Stanford.

What's the good word?

Gunther satisfies without filling you up

You like to get up from a table feeling satisfied, but not stuffed. That's why you go for modern, lighter, less filling foods.

And that's what makes GUNTHER Beer today more popular than ever. Far lower in calories than pre-Prohibition beers, it's the ideal companion to today's lighter meals.

Yet never was any beer more satisfying, more refreshing, more delicate in flavor. No old-time heavy sweetness or "hoppy" bitterness to cover up that true taste of beer you love.

Now you can satisfy your love of good beer—glass after glass of it—without filling up. So relax and enjoy it.

What's the good word? Gunther!

GUNTHER sets pace with two major league sports.

Both Colt's football and Bullets basketball games are broadcast and telecast exclusively by GUNTHER. Jim Dudley and John MacLean broadcast every exciting Colt game.

All Bullet games at home and away (over 70) will be broadcast by John MacLean and Joe Chase over WCBM. Wednesday night home and Saturday afternoon home games will be televised over WAAM-TV.
